There are days of dizziness;

There is nothing that grows faster in a house than a stack of medicine bottles.

HIS PHILOSOPHY

He had a queer philosophy—

Expecting everything that'll

He liked the medicine full strength,

For him no sugar-coated pill.

His talk from now 'til night was blunt;

He liked to fish; he liked to hunt,

And yet he didn't like to kill.

He'd rave about the Gods above

That fashioned trees and rocks, but

Love of man for man or sex for sex,

His introspective thought would

He followed streams to trace their source,

And took it for a fact of course,

God made it all just like a mill.

With love for every human ill.

His God would never make a mistake,

In fact his God was everywhere,

Except in man—the Master said,

"Go hurry the living dead."

There is no Gentile, Jew or Greek,

Dear children—none so weak

That will not find there love in Me,

Far greater than the land or sea.

Or tempting, lightning shadows grim,

That seem to have no part of Him—

"I am the Light, the Truth, the Way!"

"Ye won't comprehend the night,

"Where shadows are the sun must shine

Upon the mountain, plain and pine!"

"So, son," he loudly Master said,

"If in these shadows lie the dead,

See them not—but turn to Light,

Dispelling darkness of the night.

Where there is light, the shadows are,

The light and shadows shall be gone,

Look to the light to tell you why,

And how the darkest shadows lie.

"This human thirst for Love to slake,

Thy will you in the shadows see.

The things that never were in Me,

The blighted bud—the fallen tree,

Are not the truest thoughts from Me.

Oh! War and temper—lust and sin—

Are not of Me, but all within.

Is it the voice of God that you

Tell me everything to do,

Ask not the lichen on the wall—

Seek not in winter nor in fall

In springtime, summer, all in all—

Nor ever fancy you are strong,

To give advice or right a wrong.

Men gather sand and in a glass

Watch time run through and cry Alas!

See how life dies and all to-day

I've spent in wondering by the way!

Or everything you do or speak,

Somehow it seems to me now weak—

There is no action you can do,

Somehow it seems to me now weak—

The sayings of the Master out of pride,

To find their wandering way alone,

Or seek a sermon in a stone, to make

The hypocrites and pharisees

Sought earthly things to quell disease.

"Behn! a soul and make a cure

Of which our Master was so sure—

There is no mind in you, dear son—

But ask of me—it shall be done—

Forgive, forgive, and yet forgive

That ye, too, shall live—

We see but dimly in the wood,

Where all seems nothing else but good,

Of lesser minds is in the air—

Yet, through it all one voice speaks true—

Is the voice of Christ to you.

Spirit is mind and Christ is God.

He made us all—not from the dead,

And while the warfare seems to end,

In lightning, tempest and in deed,

What says "No!" your heart says "No."

Because, dear son, you wish it so,

Each wish does not spring from the soul,

But emanates from Him called God.

In searching for your God in vain,

Who sends us love, but never pain,

You may get lost in the night,

Call on the Master—He is light.

"Now is the time," the Master said,

To heal the sick, to raise the dead,

Pluck out the weeds from mortal mind,

Lead us to love and to be kind.

Old Omar said, "Take wind I go,"

The Master said, "It is not so!"

"I know from whence I came, my son,

The father of mankind shall make us one!"

Men saw the healing that he wrought

When "twas with him that the world thought.

Poor blind Bartemus, in his eyes

Was mirrored there a glad surprise.

"Come Jesus with me," he cried the night,

"Dear son of God—receive thy sight."

And every word I speak is true,

Through his these things are done for you.

The New Studebaker
Special-Six Touring Car

Before you buy any car, see the STUDEBAKER 1924 MODELS

Studebaker presents its complete line of 1924 models, announced a week ago, with the conviction that they will increase the prestige of the name Studebaker which, for 71 years, has stood for the best in transportation, quality and value of product.

Into these 1924 cars are built every proved feature in design that makes for the comfort, convenience and safety of passengers, and many refinements that further enhance the value of a line of cars already highly perfected.

It is common knowledge in the steel industry that Studebaker uses only the highest grades of the finest steels. And the same is true of the electrical equipment, instruments, bearings, batteries, upholstery, finishing paints, tires and accessories used in Studebaker cars.

It is equally well known that Studebaker, with $90,000,000 of actual net assets, including $45,000,000 of plant facilities, is unsurpassed in ability and resources to manufacture economically and give maximum intrinsic value for a given price.

Produced under these favorable conditions, the 1924 Studebakers are distinctly the finest cars and greatest values Studebaker ever offered.

These are not careless statements. They are facts that reflect the honesty and integrity of the manufacturer and its product just as they do the truth of Studebaker advertising.

The public has placed its confidence in Studebaker by accepting these facts, supported by the performance of Studebaker cars in owners' use. That's why Studebaker sales for the past six years have increased progressively each year and sales for the first six months of 1923 of 81,880 cars broke all six months' records.

Studebaker never cheapens quality to meet competition. The name Studebaker stands for satisfaction and service.

HELP THE FARMERS GROW WOOD

Home-Grown Forests to Relieve the Timber Shortage

Farm Forestry Extension a Public Duty
Timber is a natural farm crop. Nearly one-third of the forest land, in this country, or about 150,000,000 acres, is owned in small areas by farmers. In addition to this woodland there are millions of acres on farms which should be growing timber, but are at present lying idle or unprofitably used for other crops. How to make such land productive is a big national problem, for the future timber supply of this country must be produced largely by the farmers.

At present the average farm forest is not profitable, due to lack of proper management. It is not adequately protected against fire, insects, fungi, excessive grazing and other enemies. Weed or worthless trees are permitted to replace or hinder the growth of commercial varieties. The practice of forestry is new in this country and the farmer, like the average citizen, knows little about its application. The farm owner cannot be expected to master the technical details of woodland management without assistance. From the experience gained in the past decade through a nation-wide plan for carrying agricultural instruction to farmers, which has resulted in great financial advantage to the farmer as well as to the public, through the resultant increased production, there is a good reason to expect similar results by applying this system to woodland management. With agricultural agents in over two-thirds of the counties of the country, whose duty it is to bring to the aid of the farmer's special knowledge concerning their various problems, an organization of remarkable benefit to the farmer has been established.

While this plan has worked successfully for the betterment of field crops it has not been applied to timber growing, although in many of the eastern states a third or more of the average farm is in woodland. Several states, however, have tried out forestry extension on an experimental scale with most satisfactory results. In some states the agricultural colleges, and in others the state foresters, have been trying to help the farmer solve their woodland problems. It is not practical to include these farm woodlands in national, state, county or township forests, owned and controlled by the public, but they represent in the aggregate such a large part of the total wood-producing land of the country that everybody has a vital interest in their management. The Agricultural Extension Service, through which by education the public helps the farmers to help themselves with advantage to both, is the logical agency by which the public can best assist in making these lands produce more and better timber. In these days of high taxes there is a more insistent demand that public moneys be spent efficiently. A dollar spent in showing the farmer how to make his own woodland profitable will produce more timber than many dollars spent in growing public forests, because the farmer owns the land, carries the investment and takes all the risks involved in bringing the crop to maturity. The people in general, however, must take an interest in the farm forest or this great area of land will remain idle, or not fully utilized, to the loss of both the farmer and the public.

The Timber Shortage is a National Problem

In less than 75 years the lumber industry has eaten its way across the continent, and today is moving down the last remnant of our original forest. When we consider the variations in soil, climate and rate of growth of the many species of timber trees for the whole country, it requires on the average nearly 100 years to produce a good crop of saw timber. In 1820 we had 10,000,000 people to supply with wood—today we have over 105,000,000. Then we had about 6,000 billion board feet in our forests, while now we have hardly 2,000 billion board feet. We are starting on another century, or crop production period, with one-third as much timber and ten and one-half times as many people. These facts cannot be ignored, if our children and grandchildren are to have an adequate supply of wood products, such as we have enjoyed. In many cases prosperous communities, built up while our original forests were being harvested, have been deserted, railroads have been torn up, and social and industrial decay have followed.

Over 50 per cent of our remaining timber is in the three Pacific Coast states, while three-fourths of the people and nine-tenths of the industries are in the eastern half of the country. Transportation charges today represent about 50 per cent of the cost of lumber to the consumer in the eastern states, and most of those states are importing from 50 to 90 per cent of the timber they use, a large part of which must be brought from the Pacific coast. The cost of transportation alone already exceeds what it would cost to produce good timber in the eastern states.

With one person in 20 of our total population, dependent upon the forests and its products for employment, and with everyone of us using and consuming wood in some form daily, a timber shortage is a matter of life and death, unemployment, higher cost of living, crowded housing conditions, and more crime and distress. Already a shortage of timber in the eastern states has increased permanently the rent bill of the people of this section by millions of dollars. We have never hitherto experienced a shortage of any of our natural resources, and it is difficult to forecast the far-reaching effect of a timber shortage on our social and industrial institutions. But we are now using in the country, as a whole, over four times as much timber as is being grown, and common sense tells us that something must be done to increase production if our industrial supremacy and our standard of living are to be maintained. We are faced with a difficult problem based on economic facts, not theory or sentiment. We must have wood.

Farm Forests Save Freight.

While national, state, county and municipal forests are desirable as an essential feature of this problem of timber production, yet here is one-third of the forest land of the country which should not be owned by the public. It is a fundamental part of our great agricultural industry. It is well distributed over the country. Where there is a farm there is a wood lot or idle land that should be growing trees, with the exception of some communities in the middle western states. These farm woodlands are as a rule more fertile than the high rocky slopes that comprise much of our public forest area and the growing season is longer. They are near to the local lumber market and the timber produced is within a short haul of the ultimate consumer. Thus many eastern farmers now have a natural subsidy of from $15 to $18 per thousand board feet for raising timber, these figures being the cost of freight and distribution of lumber from the Pacific coast.

Proper management of the farm forest will increase employment for teams and farm hands. It will enable many farmers to retain their help from season to season. It will enlarge the annual farm income, enhance the value of the farm, and greatly increase its salability. The farm forests, brought to maximum production and sustained yield, will go far toward retaining or establishing wood-using industries in any community, and these industries furnish a local market for other products of the farm. More money for the farmers means more business for the local merchants, and better farm equipment. In brief, better farm forestry simply means idle acres set to work for the enrichment and prosperity of the community. Applied to thousands of communities, better farm forestry will not only help to supply the great need for a universal commodity, but it will add materially to the wealth of the nation.

Possible Increase in Production of Timber on Farms

Today the actual annual production per acre of farm woodlands is less than 100 board feet. We know that these same woodlands can be made to produce from 200 to 1,000 board feet per acre per year, with a conservative average for the country of 3000 board feet per acre. The loss therefore from failure to utilize properly the 150,000,000 acres of such lands is tremendous. With the application of forestry principles to farm woodlands it is possible to increase the timber production on farms alone by 200 board feet per acre yearly. This increase in the aggregate would amount to 30 billion board feet which is more than half of our present annual lumber consumption. The fact that most of this timber would be within easy reach of the consumer makes the proposition of Farm Forestry Extension one of special public interest.

Just as the agricultural county agent works with the farmers to increase the yield of potatoes or other farm crops, so a forester acting in the capacity of county forestry agent, or as assistant county agent, or forestry leader in one or more counties under the technical leadership of the forester would work with the farmers in applying the principles of woodland management to increase the yield of timber. Under his direction demonstrations would be made in planting, thinning and harvesting the crop. Special products and markets might be developed, cooperative marketing applied, estimates made, and technical information necessary to bring the woodlands to maximum production given to the farmer in understandable form. Questions answered on the ground are infinitely more effective than any amount of information supplied in bulletin form. That is why the county agent plan in agriculture has been so successful.

No Change in Laws Necessary

To put Farm Forestry Extension into practice is a comparatively simple matter. The legal machinery is already in existence and all that is needed is money to set it in motion. Forestry Extension work can be done under the present laws providing for agricultural extension. The overhead charges in the administration of agricultural extension would not be materially increased by adding forestry to the group of projects already under way. In other words, Forestry Extension would not mean the creation of a new organization.

The cost of agricultural extension work at present is distributed among public agencies approximately as follows: federal funds, 25 per cent; state funds, 25 per cent; county or local funds, 50 per cent. This places the burden of the burden upon the communities that receive most of the benefit. The same general plan can be applied to forestry extension. Since the production of more wood is a vital necessity to the continued prosperity of the country, and since the public must assist in its production, there is no way in which its help can bring quicker or better returns.

Proposed Farm Forestry Extension Program

A conference of State Directors of Extension, State Foresters, and State Specialists in forestry from the ten northeastern states—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, assembled in New Haven on February 22 and 23, 1923, recommended the establishment of a State Director of Extension, and that an agent should be placed in each woodland county, or group of counties, who should be adequately trained to handle farm woodland extension problems. It recommended that the state program should be conducted under an agreement to be worked out jointly by the State Director of Extension and the State Forester, with the closest co-operation between these two agencies in its formulation and execution. In this program a prominent part should be given to work among the boys' and girls' clubs, and town forests should form a most effective means of local demonstration. The agricultural colleges and experiment stations were urged to conduct research in farm woodland problems, a field which cannot be adequately covered by the Federal Forest Experiment Station alone. It was further recommended that the force now engaged in the control of white pine blight rust assist in the Forestry Extension program as far as possible without interference with its specific duties, to the end that there may be the most economical use of funds.

It is the purpose of the National Farm Forestry Extension Committee to lay before the country the facts concerning the farm woodlands, in the belief that when the possible benefits from these areas are known definite steps will be taken to reclaim this valuable resource. The problem has been considered carefully from every angle, and especially in relation to the timber shortage which has just begun to affect the consumer. It is doubtful if there is any more promising way by which the public can meet the problem of the timber shortage than by bringing to the assistance of the farmers the knowledge and experience of the forester. Farm Forestry Extension is not a matter of philanthropy to farmers, but a means, by which the consumers can best help themselves to secure a steady supply of timber.

STORY OF BY-GONE DAYS

Twenty-Six Years Ago

Progress is being made on the Oxford Central Electric Road. Trouble has developed over the route from Norway village to Norway Lake. This will be adjusted at a commissioners meeting at the Beals House. Two laborers - shanties have been put up which is the first construction work thus far.

Charles L. Bartlett has received a diploma from the pharmacy course at the University of Maine.

In a recent thunder shower lightning did queer freaks in D. L. Holder's house at East Otisfield. The fluid passed through nearly every room, damaging walls, pictures, and carpets. Sixty-seven panes of window glass were broken, a sewing machine ruined and 40 pans of milk spoiled in the cellar. The family escaped with only a severe shock.

NORWAY AND VICINITY

Methodist Church Notes

Next Sunday, August 5th, there will be Morning and Evening Worship, 10:45 A. M. and 7 P. M. with sermons by the pastor, Rev. T. C. Chapman. Sunday School at 12 in charge of O. L. Stone, Superintendent. At 6:15 Stella Smith is to lead the Epworth League devotion meeting in the Community Hall.

Topic "The Companionship of Jesus." Luke 19, 1-10, John 11, 1-6.

The Home Department met with Mrs. Philbrook, the superintendent, on Wednesday afternoon.

On Friday afternoon, Aug. 3rd, the Ladies' Aid held their semi-annual sale in the Community Hall.

The program for the Camp Meeting at Empire Grove grows more interesting as added details are published. On Sunday, Aug. 12, Dr. W. M. Forgrave of Springfield, Mass., will give an address on the topic, "Shall America Go Back?" Dr. Forgrave is secretary for his state of the Anti-Saloon League, and a prominent officer and lecturer in the Grange. He is a forceful speaker with a message all want to hear.

Bishop Thirkfield has not spoken in Maine since his election to the Episcopal Synod, and will be entirely new to Empire Grove audiences. His lecture on Saturday evening, August 18th, and his sermon on Sunday morning, the 19th, will be among outstanding features of the home address is Mexico City.

Dr. L. O. Hartman's recent visit to Russia in company with Bishop Blake gave him an inside view of conditions in that great country, and was, in itself, a marked contribution to church history. His address of Sunday afternoon, August 19th, is among the things no one will want to miss.

The names of the leaders in the Bible Study Hour each day, the Sunday School Hour, the Young People's Hour are guarantees of the interest and profit to be gained from attendance all through the week. The recreational features at the grounds and at the beach at Lower Range Pond will be added attractions under Mr. Oliver's leadership.

Attractive arrangements can be made for parties who wish a cottage for a week.

OXFORD

Mrs. Frances Walker

Mrs. Frances Chabourne Walker, widow of the late George F. Walker, who died in Portland, Tuesday, July 24, was brought to Oxford for burial Thursday morning. Mrs. Walker was born in Oxford, Feb. 9, 1844, and was the daughter of Samuel H. and Charlotte Washburn Chabourne. Mrs. Walker became the wife of George H. Walker in 1866 and resided in Oxford until 1888, when they moved to Portland, where they lived and where both Mr. and Mrs. Walker have died within the past six months.

Mrs. Walker was prominent in social and patriotic organizations, being one of the founders of the Daughters of 1812 of which she was twice president and an officer in the National organization. She was a prominent member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Literary Union, W. C. T. IMPROVEMENT OF POULTRY

During the spring there was a great mortality among chickens in Maine. Under the wide range of troubles which might befall little chicks during the first few weeks of their life it is impossible to say which factor was responsible for the greatest loss. One disease, however, responsible for a high mortality in many flocks is bacillary white diarrhea.

Unfortunately the cause of this disease and the way in which it is transmitted to the chicks are not well understood by a majority of poultry keepers. The quite common impression that white diarrhea is caused by over-feeding or chilling is absolutely wrong. Indigestion and diarrhea are frequently brought about by these causes but they are not of a contagious nature.

Bacillary white diarrhea is a highly infectious disease and it can exist only when a specific germ is present. Briefly, the disease acts in this way: Some of the chicks which have the disease do not die, but they carry the germs of the disease in their system and may transmit it at any time to others in the flock. When mature, hens show no signs of the presence of this disease. The germs, however, become located in the ovary, and may be incorporated in some of the eggs, so when the eggs are laid the disease germs are present. When these eggs are incubated the temperature also develops the disease so that by the time the chicks hatch, the disease is quite well started.

The chicks show no outward signs of the disease until the fourth or fifth day. The mortality is greatest between the fifth and fifteenth days. The symptoms of this disease may not be materially different from those of ordinary diarrhea.

During the first two or three days of the chicks life the disease is so highly contagious that a few infected chicks in an incubator may spread it to many others.

There is no known satisfactory cure of white diarrhea. To control the disease it is necessary to eliminate the disease carriers from the flock and breed only from disease free birds.

This can be done by what is known as an agglutination test of a blood sample from each hen used as a breeder. Until recently no arrangements existed in Maine for making this test but at present all of the New England States are co-operating in a drive against white diarrhea in poultry, the aim being to develop accredited flocks which are free from this disease. The testing work in Maine is being done by the department of bacteriology and veterinary science at the College of Agriculture in cooperation with the extension service.

Success in raising chickens depends to a large extent upon the vitality and health of the chicks and their freedom from contagious diseases. With this disease so prevalent, there is found to be an increasing demand for disease free chicks and a big opportunity in the development of accredited flocks as distributing centers.

Information regarding tests to identify the disease may be obtained from the county agents or by addressing the College of Agriculture, Orono.

FABULOUS PAY IN THE HAY-FIELDS DESCRIBED

Robert C. Morrill of Lake Shore Park paused from getting in his last haycock, and taking a rack full to his neighbor's barn as a present, because his own would not hold any more, and proceeded to do a bit of machine work in his shop. Asked if he had employed any help in the fields. His reply was a positive, "No," and added that he would not pay the prices required by hay help.

Hobart Pillsbury in the Boston Sunday Herald elucidates the hay field workers wages as follows:

New Hampshire has had lately an enormous amount of advertising from a report that would be important if true. The report was this: Three young men applied at the state employment bureau for work. They were offered jobs in the hayfields at $6 a day, but refused, saying that they needed $7 and found.

For some reason this report was copied widely and circulated all over the United States. The general inference was that the young men were insulted by the offer of a paltry $6 a day; that it was, in fact, bad form for the young men to be seeking jobs anyway. The employment should seek them; Editors have commented on the humiliation and chagrin which the young men must have felt at being offered only $6 a day.

State Labor Commissioner John S. B. Davis has investigated the whole story and here are the facts. These young men applied for jobs at 75 cents an hour and stated that they understood the farmers were paying $6 or $7 a day. Instead of offering the young men $6 a day, however, the employment bureau said, in the words of the well-known banana vendor:

"Yes, we have no $6 and $7 jobs today. But we have some very nice $4.50 jobs and found, and we advise you to take them."

The upshot of the matter was that the young men looked around afterwards among the farmers and could not get a job at any price. The farmers had plenty of help if they were willing to pay for it. Most of the complaint about lack of help on the farms appears to come from farmers who remember when a good worker would labor from dawn to dusk for $1.50. But that was when mill hands worked for 90 cents; that was before the war, before the unions, and before it was criminal to take a jug of hard cider into the hayfields.

"Them days have gone forever," said the News and Critic.

EAST OXFORD

Pratt Neighborhood

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Rowe have gone to Webster for visit with their daughter, Mrs. Annie Lane. Mrs. Lane and her son came for them Monday afternoon, the 23rd.

Prof. J. F. Moody visited Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Pratt several days recently.

Mrs. Jennie Bessworth has gone to Canada.

H. M. Pratt has shut down the mill at Oxford for a short time during haying. Harry Staples, Guy Sawin, Harry Fuller, Philip York and Mr. MacAllister have been at work for B. M. and H. M. Pratt, haying. Mr. Yeaton of Welchville with a pair of horses, also worked a few days. They finished haying, Tuesday, July 24th. H. M. Pratt and crew went to the Dr. Farris farm in Oxbow which he owns. A family from Oxford have moved into the Bosworth house.

It's funny how far out of their way people will go to find happiness when all they have to do is to turn around and take it home with them.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING

Mountain climbing is becoming recognized as one of the most healthful as well as one of the most exhilarating and delightful of sports. Carried out in the right manner it hardens the muscles of the body, stimulates the heart and lungs and gives one the glow of perfect health.

Coupled with the wonderful exercise which one gets through mountain climbing is the inspiration of the superb picture which stretches out before one's eyes when the summit is reached. It is a reward well worth all of the exertion and physical discomfort experienced.

Undoubtedly there is no state in the Union where rational mountain climbing may be enjoyed to any better advantage than in Maine. There are the hard, high climbs, and the shorter and the easier ones. The great ascent is that up the side of Mt. Katahdin, recognized as one of the sportiest as well as one of the best in the United States.

The Rangeley region abounds in mountains which are accessible to the climber and which afford wonderful panoramas of the surrounding country from their summits. Among these is Saddleback Mountain, 4,456 feet in height, the second highest in Maine and exceeded in altitude only by Katahdin's 5,273 feet. Then in the Rangeley region, also are Mt. Bigelow, 3,600 feet high; Mt. Abraham, 3,388 feet high, and Mt. Blue, 3,200 feet in height.

Practically every section of Maine has its hills and mountains although it has never been considered as a mountainous state. Even Mt. Desert Island has its wonderful mountains located in Lafayette National Park, including Cadillac Mountain, the highest on the Atlantic seacoast in the United States, and rising 1,532 feet into the air. Then there is romantic Mount Kineo on the shores of Moosehead Lake 1,958 feet high.

Oxford County is one of the most beautiful hill and mountain districts in America, rivaling in beauty, and similar to the Green Mountains of Vermont. Over in northern Cumberland County and western Oxford lies Pleasant Mountain, 2,007 feet in height, from the top of which experienced mountain climbers declare may be enjoyed a superb panorama. This mountain is located on the Theodore Roosevelt International Highway, and is probably the most accessible and one of the easiest to climb in New England. From its summit may be seen about 35 different lakes with the Atlantic Ocean to the south, and from it may also be obtained a striking view of the White Mountain range.

Another popular hill in this vicinity for mountain climbers is Douglass Hill, in the town of Baldwin, and in its immediate vicinity is still another favorite, Bald Face, somewhat lower and an easy trip for the beginner. In mountain climbing one should make the ascent very slowly, resting frequently and not unduly exerting oneself in the least. The harm in this sport comes in rushing, resulting in over-exertion and possible injury to the organs of the body. Rightly carried out, however, there is nothing so good for a person in the proper physical condition to keep him in shape for the strenuous routine of daily life.

GOOSEBERRY PIE VERSUS WHITE PINE LUMBER

The Gooseberry Family, which includes both gooseberry and currant bushes, has been convicted of assisting in forest destruction by harboring the blister rust, a deadly enemy of the white pine. Unlike the chestnut blight fungus which spreads direct from tree to tree, the blister rust fungus can spread only through the medium of members of the gooseberry family. This fact makes the control of the disease practical. Eliminate the gooseberries and currants and save the pines. This means that if white pine districts gooseberry pie made from wild gooseberries will have to go so that we can continue to grow white pine lumber.

That there are wild gooseberries and currants of several kinds growing in New England and New York will be news to many people. Since they all act as carriers of the blister rust, it is worth while that they be recognized. There are three wild gooseberries, the prickly-berried one and two smooth-berried species. There are also four kinds of wild currants, the black skunk currant with small yellow dots on the under surface of the leaves, the red currant having a three-lobed leaf like that of the red maple, the stunk currant with trailing stems, and a strong-smelling leaves and stems, and the prickly currant with small prickles covering the stems.

If you are not sure what kinds of currants and gooseberries grow in and around your pine lot, ask your blister rust agent or your local Farm Bureau.

FIGURES DON'T LIE

An Irishman working for a Dutchman asked for an increase in pay.

The Dutchman replied: "If you are worth it, I would be pleased to give it to you. Now let us see what you do in a year. You let us see what you do in a year, you sleep 8 hours every day, which makes 122 days you sleep, taken from 365 days, leaves 243. Now you have 8 hours recreation every day, which makes 122 days taken from 243 days leaves 121 days. We have 52 Sundays in a year, which you have off, leaving you 69 days. You have 14 days vacation; take this off and you have 55 days left. You don't work Saturday afternoons; this makes 26 days in a year. Take this off and you have 29 days left. Now, Pat, you are allowed 1 1/2 hours for meals, which totals in a year 25 days. Take this off and you have 4 days left. I always give you St. Patrick's Day off, so I ask you, Pat, if you are entitled to a raise?" Pat then answered: "Well, what the deuce have I been doing, then?"

THE RIGHT TO WORK

Employers in the building industry in New York have decided to undertake establishing the open shop in the entire country.

Unionism has accomplished much for the workers in this nation and contributed greatly to the common welfare. It has a legitimate place in our highly systematized industrial machine but just as the power of capital can be abused if manipulated by unscrupulous persons, so can the power of labor organizations become a tyranny when controlled by radical labor leaders who ignore all thought of the public interest in carrying out their holdup programs.

When any union tries to set itself above the constitution which guarantees a man protection in his right to work regardless of his religious, political or labor affiliations, it is headed straight for the rocks of public condemnation.

What is the Life of an Exide Battery?

Many car owners have obtained five or more years of service from their Exide Batteries. Others permit their batteries to be ruined in a few months through neglect and preventable abuse.

The things which do the greatest damage are lack of water, lack of charge and properly secured. So we say frankly to Exide owners that the life of their batteries is largely in their hands.

Keep your battery well charged, filled with water, clean and properly secured in its place and it will give a long life and unfailing service.

FLAMMA FORTUNA

Students of classic literature and history are familiar with the ceremonies attendant upon the Flamma of Fortuna. Flamma Fortuna. These rites are performed at every Roman Rag festa which takes place during that week in August which sees the new moon. No altar is more calculated to attract the populace, as the Flamma Fortuna. An old writer says, "Here young and old light the torch whose ascending perfume appeals to the gods. The warrior marching to battle and vincere aut mori," seeks to know his fate; the young man tremblingly ventures to discover his fortune in love. Wherever is found the Flamma altar with its symbol of abundant life, there is also found the eager mass seeking knowledge of these matters which "lie upon the knees of the gods." The mysteries of the Flamma Fortuna will be revealed at the Roman Rag Fair at the Paris Hill Country Club, Aug. 16. Look for the little shrine with its symbolic dancing figure; place a coin upon the altar and light a perfumed torch—at the red light if your prayer be for victory in conquest of adventure, arms, or love; at the white if you seek success of the intellect, for peace of days, for happiness in the quiet life. The gods heed the request only if the seeker bear away a smoking torch which is not quenched until it is consumed.—Adv.

Special Corporation Meeting

Very little time was required to transact business at the special meeting of Norway Village Corporation at Norway Hall, Tuesday evening.

Voted to install a light at the corner of Beal Street and Bolster Place.

Voted to place a hydrant on Grove St., near the mill of H. Walter Brown, being erected in the section east of Fair St., formerly the Ella Jewett (Odo) property.

Corporation voted to raise $1,000 for this purpose. The Norway Water Co. proposes to pay one-sixth the cost.

This extension from the main on Fair street will require some 500 feet of pipe with probably six inch pipe used. Besides the Norway Turning Co., there are now one or two residences to be served with chances good for many others within a few years.

Novelty Turning Co.'s New Home

Ingalls & Luck, contractors, have the Novelty Turning Co., mill about ready for the machinery. Wiring for lights and power has been started by the Central Maine Power Co., which will handle the electrical equipment.

The new factory is a roomy structure 116x28 feet, one story with truss roof. The main office fronts Olcott street, with doors on either side leading to private offices of H. Walter Brown and R. W. Evans.

There is a room for records, and a coat room with toilets. The rooms are finished in hardwood and well lighted.

A building 24x70 feet a few feet east of the mill will house the heating plant in a room with cement walls and floor. A good sized store house is under the same roof.

The factory will be modern in every particular and has been named "Buyer's Glass House" because of its many windows. Probably the wheels will be turning full blast before the middle of September.

Mrs. Mary A. Williams

The remains of Mrs. Mary A. Williams, widow of Henry Williams, was brought to Norway, Sunday, from Amherst, Mass., and funeral services were held Monday forenoon from the First Universalist Church at 10 o'clock, Rev. Chester G. Miller officiated. The bearers were Fred D. Hosmer, Jesse F. Alford, Howard A. Boulton and Stephen H. Cummings. Interment took place in the family lot in Pine Grove Cemetery. There was a profusion of beautiful flowers.

Mrs. Williams was a native of Norway, the daughter of Noah O. and Chloe Young Stevens. Had she lived until the 31st, she would have been 85 years of age, as she was born July 31, 1838.

Mrs. Williams was a member of the Universalist Church. She was one of a family of nine girls, one of whom survives; Mrs. Dorothea Horv of Norway. She visited her sister only a few weeks ago. Mrs. Williams leaves her daughter, her sister and several nephews and nieces.

After playing a few games, they were all conducted to the house where a table bountifully filled with goodies of every kind was to be had. Little favors with each little guest's name was at every place and each was invited to find his own. After all were found, they were told to pull a string and would find a present or prize at the end of the string. Of course much excitement and merriment was caused.

Then all were served with ice cream, birthday cake, sandwiches, fancy cookies, fudge, candy and oranges, and a large bowl of punch was served.

As they started for home, all were presented with a balloon and wishing their little host much joy and many more happy birthdays to enjoy.

ALBANY

An Active Month at Albany

The month of August promises to be a very active one for the people of Albany. It gives credit to such a place to show that there is a great deal of activity in the church atmosphere.

In the church atmosphere. In the Literary Digest of July 21, the Vice-President is quoted as saying, "We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law; we need more religion." This is the hope also, for this and other communities.

The word is clear, it is not more religions, but more of religion, the true state of heart.

For the coming days the following schedule is in store: The Ladies' Circle will meet the 2nd of August and again on the 23rd. The hostesses of the first circle are, Mrs. Howard Allen, Mrs. Leon Kimball and Mrs. Calvert Fullerton. Those of the second are not yet appointed.

Each Sunday morning at ten o'clock the Sunday school meets in the Vestry, and the morning worship is immediately following themes have been suggested for the morning worship, respectively:

August 5, The Presence of Christ Jesus.

August 12, The Presence of God.

August 19, The Greatest Conquest.

August 26, The Coming Future.

Each one of these themes will touch upon important issues and questions of faith and Christian living and will be plain heart to heart messages to help people have their problems and questions, so often hard to understand, but it may be that a little helpful word may give a suggestion that will help solve that problem.

Another feature of the month will be a series of topical meetings. These, it is hoped, will be well worth the extra effort needed to come out during the week when the daily toil and tasks often make one tired and weary, so a bit of encouragement may be helpful in keeping up his courage and efforts. These meetings will be from August 7th to August 17th, four nights each week. The topics will be, respectively:

August 7, What is in a Name?

August 8, Who is the Son?

August 9, Who is the Third Person?

August 10, What is a Man?

August 14, Who is Our Greatest Enemy?

August 15, What is God's Program?

August 16, What About the Jew?

August 17, When and How Will Jesus Come?

Friends and strangers are urged to be present to share in the blessings and joys of Christian living. The little church is not confined to Hunt's Corner at Albany but also tries to reach out and help others in the community. It tries to keep in touch with the friends and people around by helping in the Sunday School work. This is also a blessed privilege in times when Sunday School work is sorely needed throughout our country and states.

We would have more faith in the ladies cleaning up politics if so many of them had not arrived at the point where they think it is unadvisable to yield a bribe.

To Quote an Authority on the Subject

By THE VETERAN MOTORIST

W. R. RASMUSSEN, a representative of the National Safety Council, gives as one of the eight principal causes of traffic accidents "passing a street car going in the same direction on the left on a two-way street." And I recall, from my own observations, at least three smashes that occurred in just that way.

Some States absolutely forbid passing a trolley car on the left under any conditions—and it's a good thing. But even where it isn't prohibited by law, ordinary horse sense always tells me that it's a risky thing to do. And, as a result, I'm never even tempted to try it.

I know how bothersome the trolleys are on a busy street sometimes. But they have to be there, and what's a second or two of time saved if you've got to "take a chance" in doing it? It doesn't pay—in the long run.

SOUTH WATERFORD

Chautauqua

The coming of the Chautauqua Aug. 3, 4, and 6 means a great deal to the people of Waterford and vicinity. It affords a most delightful entertainment for old and young. The lectures are very interesting as well as helpful.

The first afternoon there will be an inspirational lecture on the topic "He Can Who Thinks He Can." At night it will be followed by a discussion of the present-day unrest, "The Red Horizon."

Prof. Volmer of the University of Pennsylvania is the lecturer, he is fitted to handle these subjects in a masterful way. The second day in the afternoon the lecture will be "The High Mission of Woman," while at night the subject will be "Main St. vs. Broadway."

The second night lecture, therefore, should be one of the most attractive events of the whole chautauqua. All women's clubs could attend the second afternoon in a body. Mr. Horr is a very brilliant man with a charming personality.

The 3rd day lecture will be in keeping with the line of thought suggested by the preceding addresses. The subject being "The Fundamentals of Business Prosperity" and at night the closing lecture will be "Your America, What Will You Do With It?" It is expected there will not be a vacant seat and standing room will be at a premium. Dr. Culp of Cleveland, Ohio, has been chosen as the last lecturer. Dr. Culp is one of the greatest educators of the country, and is a chautauqua lecturer, who is very much in demand over the entire country.

The first day: The Tooley Quartette presents a very unique and varied program. The members are very versatile, each being a singer, actor and pianist; in the afternoon there will be miscellaneous program while at night they will give a special version of the famous comic opera, "The Mikado." This opera has long been a favorite with music lovers.

The second day: Ellsworth Plummer, impersonator. This is his fifth season with the Radcliffe Bureau. His programs are melodies of songs, stories, costume selections and character delineations from the poems and prose of the day. With Mr. Plummer is Miss Maud Turner, a charming soprano and piano accompanist. With them also, is Frank Lucas, piano accordionist. This is an Italian instrument and the most noted players have been Italians. The Chautauqua is very fortunate in being able to present Mr. Lucas, a native of Italy, but an American citizen for a number of years.

Third day: It is seldom that any Chautauqua has the privilege of presenting to its audience an artist of the ability and reputation of Helen Ware. She has toured the United States three times and played in nearly every large city of the country. Miss Ware will appear both afternoon and evening and her appearance promises to be a real letter musical event of the year. With Miss Ware is Miss Ethel Shepard, a delightful soprano and pianist. Allen Hammond, a promising tenor, with a beautiful lyric voice, will also assist in the program on this day. We feel safe in saying that every artist that appears will be deserving of great credit.

LET HIM DO IT

"Let me do it myself" is the insistent cry of childhood. "Let it alone, I can get over it!" cries the small boy, when an obstacle bars his path. He scorns the helping hands that would assist him, struggles with all his might, and conquers. Suppose it does take a great deal of time and energy, what is time for, if not to help one's self? He thrills with pride over his power and this achievement prepares him for the next more difficult feat.

That mother who wishes to do the best thing for her child will do well to put the brake on her own inclination to make life too easy for him by extending the helping hand when the first difficulty arises. The child learns to do by doing. He learns to walk by walking, and works at it for several weeks in a series of steps and falls. The wise mother deprecates the falls, but fully understands that there is no royal road to walking. Every mother should school herself to withdraw her hands and allow her child to do and dare as far as his strength and ability will permit. This should be done in every phase of the child's life. He should be allowed to face his own obstacles, do his own thinking, figure out his own plays, solve his moral and social problems. People learn to think by thinking; to play by playing, and the very best way to learn to live is by living.

That mother who deprives her child of the privilege of facing his own problems not only deprives him of the joy of participating in life, but also inhibits his thinking, represses his activity and leads him to evade life. It is a common knowledge that the refusal to face the issues of life brings mental complexes and insanity in varying forms. On the other hand, the child who is allowed and urged to face his problems honestly and solve them to the best of his ability is being trained to live bravely. He will make mistakes, but these very mistakes will lead the way to a better solution of the same or other problems. The mother's part is important in this doing and daring. It is her place to know her child, to know the tasks that he sets for himself and to keep an even balance between his strength and ability and the task which he essays. If the tasks are too hard for the child, his repeated failures will make him cowardly, and he will lose confidence in her who assigns or allows the task. If, on the other hand, the tasks set are such that he can perform them, and he goes from one victory to another, he will feel the deepest love and confidence in her who has led him to that elation which comes only in conquering that which tries one's strength. —Kansas City Star.

POULTRY DISEASES AND SANITATION

During the last decade rapid strides have been made in eradication and prevention of many of the common diseases of poultry, and many control measures have been advised after years of careful research. General preventive measures are the keynotes to all successful poultry raising. By far the most vital of these is sanitation. This includes general cleanliness about the premises, removal of droppings, well drained runways, warm and well ventilated houses, efficient spraying at frequent intervals with disinfectant, immediate removal of sick and infected birds, and any factor that may contribute to the general sanitary condition of the plant. Other factors of equal importance are, the location and construction of buildings, proper food and plenty of exercise.

The diseases most common among domestic fowl and those which cause most serious losses may be divided into two or three general classes. The first constitute those which might be termed diseases of the digestive tract. In this class are included cholera, typhoid, diarrheal infections and other troubles in which the seat of infection is in the alimentary canal. These are of short duration, usually end fatally. The general symptoms are similar in most of these diseases, hence further investigation is necessary before a diagnosis is complete. In acute forms the birds may be found dead under the roost, while in less acute forms death may not ensue for five days to one week. A general study of the anatomy is valuable in arriving at a diagnosis. This should be followed by a post-mortem examination and if possible by confirmation in the laboratory. Successful treatment of infected birds has never been accomplished. In some cases intestinal antiseptics have proved efficacious. Removal of infected birds, followed by a general disinfection, is perhaps the most efficient means of combating these diseases.

In the second group are included tuberculosis, roup and pox and other diseases of the respiratory tract. Tuberculosis, due to its insidious nature, is perhaps the hardest to control. The symptoms are seldom manifested until in the later stages. The tuberculin test, similar to that used in cattle, has been a great aid in controlling this disease. Reason may be determined and dispensed with. In a heavily infected flock the best method to apply is the ax, followed by a replacement with healthy stock. General sanitary measures, proper food and ventilation may contribute toward eradication.

Roup, or common colds, constitute a serious trouble in many localities. Decreased egg production and a general depression of activity of the bird are the not heavy as a rule, but the economic loss demands that this disease be eradicated and controlled. As lack of sanitation contributes largely to its spread, a general clean-up of the premises should be inaugurated. This may be followed by medication with antiseptics applied to the drinking water. In some cases individual treatment, whereby the diseased areas are removed, and the wounds treated with iodine, may be necessary. Vaccination has been advocated by some authorities, both as a preventative and curative measure. We have found excellent results with its use after treating some 30,000 birds.

The third group constitutes those troubles known as nutritional diseases such as gout, lameness, botulism, etc. These are usually associated with improper feeding, lack of exercise, or spoiled feed. The birds should have plenty of green feed, sufficient minerals, and, above all, be made to work for their meals.

In addition to these may be included certain parasites such as lice, ticks and worms which cause the breeder considerable losses through impaired vitality of the birds. Sanitation again is one of the chief means of control, followed by treatment with various disinfectants and antiseptics. In the treatment of worms to be mixed with mash has proved beneficial.

PARIS HILL COUNTRY CLUB FAIR

The Paris Hill Country Club fair will be held this year on August 16th, on the grounds of the Club at Paris. The fair is to be bigger and better than ever before; with many new attractions.

The Roman Rag Fair will be one of the features of the day, and in it will be found many new and old things; old mirrors, old books that can be picked up for a song, beads of every hue, old bits of jewelry, lace, hats, bric-a-brac, objects of art, furniture. In front of the Rag Fair stand the altar of "Plasma Fortune" with its good fortune for the fortunate one who can keep his torch burning to the end. "Papita," the Roman dancing girl, will give hourly performances.

Next to the Roman Rag Fair is "Good Children" Street, with all the lovely things that are dear to the children's hearts. Never before have there been such dolls as you will see in this Street; whole booths of balloons and toys. In the middle of the famous Fishing Pool full of lucky fish that are longing to be caught by the little hands of the children.

"Opposite" "Good Children Street" is the Street of Nations with its new show seen for the first time at this Fair. In the Club House, the Paris Gift Shop will have new and beautiful fancy work, lovely brass and a variety of garden novelties. The Early American Shop will specialize in quaint Old New England hooked rugs, tufted and knotted bed spreads and runners, bags, tuck away tables, etc.

In the Housekeepers' Corner will be found every variety of novelties, many new models of shoe bags, jams and jellies.

ANGLERS NEED NEW LICENSES
Fishermen should remember that they must procure their fishing licenses of their City or Town Clerk. They cannot obtain one by sending to the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, or to the clerk of any town, city, or plantation except the one in which they reside.

Every Town, City and Plantation clerk in the State has been supplied with a generous supply of the new combination licenses and so far as the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game is concerned, the intention is, that no stone shall be turned in the way of calling to the attention of the public the requirements of the new law.

A QUESTION
We have read with interest the pertinent poems pertaining to the new names which have been bestowed on Millettville and Crockett Ridge. Time was before the day of motor vehicles, when every farmer was the proud possessor of a yoke of fat oxen and a span of heavy draft horses and was content in the realization that his hamlet had been named "much more happily than the neighboring ones of "Hard Scabble," "Hungry Hollow," "Turkey Ridge," "Sodom," "Yaggy" or "Trap Corner."

If some enterprising and wealthy native should purchase a Packard, would Durant Avenue become Portland Boulevard?

The ladder to success is rather frail, but at that it is seldom overloaded.

P. N. Practical Front Corsets

ARE IN GREAT DEMAND

P. N. Practical Front Corsets

There are many reasons why P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT CORSETS are different from other corsets that lace in the front, but there is one outstanding feature.

It is the location of the front clasp coming directly in the center of the body. It puts the front closing of the corset exactly where it should be; directly in the front, in the same position that it is found in back lace corsets.

At a glance you appreciate this feature. No longer will you have to suffer the loss of not being able to wear front lace corsets because you can't stand the pressure of the front clasp under the bust. P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT CORSETS have solved this difficulty for you.

A cleverly arranged inner elastic vest combined with the feature of the clasp in the center will open for you a new era in your corset wearing. P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT CORSETS will give you that combination of comfort plus style that you have always wanted and never found.

Holeproof Hosiery

We are making a host of friends with these hose that are so beautiful and wear so long. Their long service makes them first choice for economy. In regular and out sizes, the new elastic top is a great feature.

We have several quantities in pure silk, silk faced and lisle.
